

'Jew-maican' kosher jerk chicken

No sight along Monday's West Indian American Day Carnival Parade prompted more smiles and cell phone pictures than a big cardboard sign on a low cast-iron fence.

"KOSHER JERK CHICKEN."

From the sweet-scented smoke arose a cry, "It's Jew-maican!"

The chicken in question was being cooked in the classic style on a big, smoky grill fashioned from a steel drum. But the guy with the tongs wore a yarmulke and looked like typical member of the Jewish community in Crown Heights, unless you counted the T-shirt dyed in the black, green and yellow of the Jamaican flag and the apron stenciled with "Jerk Hall of Fame."
