

Michael Jackson's Deathbed Up For Auction

Michael Jackson's deathbed is being sold at auction along with other items from his family home.

Belongings up for grabs at Julien's Auctions Gallery in Beverly Hills, California, include fine arts and furnishings.

Some buyers may be interested in the Asian ceramic jardinières or the French 18th and 19th century style furnishings.

But the lot that is expected to get the most attention is the bed where Jackson was found unconscious by his personal physician Dr Conrad Murray on June 25, 2009.

Murray was found guilty of involuntary manslaughter by giving Jackson the anaesthetic propofol - normally used to sedate patients for surgery - that was deemed the main cause of the singer's death.

The 58-year-old faces up to four years in prison and the loss of his medical licence following the conviction. He had pleaded not guilty.

The exhibit, named after Jackson's address 100 North Carolwood Drive, will be free and open to the public from December 12.

The sale will take place on December 17.
