Sean Paul to tour the U.S. ahead of album release

Internationally acclaimed entertainer, Sean Paul seeks to successfully grasp the attention one of his biggest markets as he's set to drop his successful new album in the United States.

Tomahawk Technique will officially debut in the U.S. on September 18, eight months after being unveiled in select markets worldwide. Since its digital release in January, Tomahawk Technique earned Sean Paul chart-topping success in Japan while also earning top-ten plaudits in countries such a Germany, Switzerland, Belgium and France. physical version of Tomahawk Technique will make its way onto American shelves two weeks from today as Sean Paul seeks to add to his over 10 million albums sold worldwide to date. In an effort to promote his latest project, Sean Paul has announced dates for his Tomahawk Technique North American Tour, which begins the day after his album's release (September 19) at the House of Blues in Los Angeles. According to Sean Paul, Tomahawk Technique should connect with an American fan base that has strongly supported his previous four efforts, Stage One, Dutty Rock (Best Reggae Album – 2004 Grammys), The Trinity and Imperial Blaze. "I took a different approach on this album in every way," Sean Paul said via press release. "I worked with a lot of pop producers and challenged them to make their interpretation of a dancehall beat while also collaborating with some artistes I've always admired but never had the chance to work with. The reaction to the album so far has been incredible but I am excited for it to come out in the States and to be able to support it with a great tour." Tomahawk Technique features the smash hit, Got 2 Luv U (featuring Alexis Jordan), which has topped charts across the Caribbean and Europe and How Deep Is Your Love alongside former Destiny's Child singer, Kelly Rowland.
