

"War Fi God" Featuring Bounty Killer, Kiprich & Kalado

DreDay latest productions "War Fi God" featuring Bounty Killer, Kiprich & Kalado has yet to officially be released and it is already creating a heated buzz on social media and airwaves.

After a snippet was leaked on youtube with the song dubbed a "Tommy Lee Diss". Media and fans have speculated that a war has been brewing between the artists in anticipation of Sting 2012. Those rumors have been fueled with comments from artists via various social media and although no name has been directly mentioned, dancehall enthusiasts have already made their own deduction. Producer DreDay states that the song was not a Tommy lee diss "Kiprich brought the idea to me,he sang out the hook and i tracked it in and lay the beat. He was the one who thought that bounty killer would be a good addition to the project and later Kalado was added to the second verse and so it just came together" The single distributed by 21st Hapilos Digital will be available Sept 18th 2012 on itunes. Having recently released The Baddest Riddim (available on itunes via 21st Hapilos Digital) Dreday is busy in the studio putting the finishing touches on singles with Aidonia, ChevaghN & Konshen, Kalado and Bounty killer set to be release in the coming weeks. He is also in the process of working on an album with Voicemail. "I don't really follow the hype, I'm just always making music" he says.
