

Bolt beats bus

The world's fastest man Usain Bolt famously "raced" against Prince Harry - and now he has taken on a bus.

While the royal managed to "outsprint" the Jamaican, Bolt was taking no chances this time as he made sure he pipped the vehicle to the tape, even at a jogging pace. The six-time Olympic champion seemed to be taking the exhibition 80-metre race seriously beforehand as he stretched for several minutes in Buenos Aires. But during the contest on the streets of the Argentinian capital, he realised the number 59 bus had no chance so he did not bother to ramp up his performance to full sprint mode. Bolt, who won the 100m, 200m and 4x100m relay golds in two consecutive Olympics - Beijing 2008 and London 2012 - said he has set his sights on winning a third time in Rio in 2016.
