

Tessanne Chin makes Billboard again

The Voice: Season Five winner, Tessanne Chin has once again earned recognition from music's most established chart as Billboard magazine now features two more songs from the Jamaican sensation, according to reports Friday.

After peaking on the Billboard Top 100 chart at 64 with her rendition of Simon and Garfunkel's Bridge Over Troubled Water during The Voice semifinal, Chin has outdone herself once again by placing at number 51 for a similarly masterful performance of Whitney Houston's classic, I Have Nothing in the final. Additionally, her performance of Let It Be with coach, Adam Levine has entered the chart at number 76. Both songs are also featured on Billboard's Heatseekers chart, with I Have Nothing topping the chart while Let It Be is seventh. Meanwhile, Chin's new single, Tumbling Down, written by One Republic's Ryan Tedder could enter the Billboard charts as early as next week, according to reports. The song has been heavily promoted and was performed during her media blitz in the United States following her victory on The Voice, including on The Tonight Show with Jay Leno, Live with Kelly and Michael and Access Hollywood Live. Her new album is expected to be in stores early next year.
